

Is the IB Diploma Programme right for you?

Answer the following questions to help you decide.

	Yes, that sounds like me.	Not currently, but I'm interested.	No, and that doesn't appeal to me.
Are you curious about the world?
Do you want to have a broad range of knowledge?
Do you take mostly above-level or honors classes?
Do you treat people and the environment with empathy, consideration, and respect?
Do you engage in action to help others?
Do you consider yourself to be a risk-taker?
Are you resilient and not put off by setbacks and failures?
Do you like to share ideas, feelings, and information with others?
Do you participate in a variety of activities?
Do you generally do well in all of your classes?
Do you take advanced classes because you like to challenge yourself?
Do you approach new situations critically or creatively?
Do you consider yourself to be open to new ideas and new points of view?
Do you enjoy learning?
Do you understand the value in giving and receiving constructive feedback?
Do you like small classes?
Do you like having the classes with many of the same students?
Do you enjoy academic writing?
Do you like learning through class discussion?
Do you have good time management skills?

If you answered mostly “Yes” or “Interested,” you might be a great candidate for the IB Diploma Program. For more information, contact the IB Program Coordinator Amy Bomke (abomke@amphi.com or in room A121), talk to your counselor, and visit www.amphi.com/Page/7844.

If you answered mostly “No,” you might be a great candidate for a combination of courses from any of CDO’s programs: IB, AP, CTE, and standard courses.
